Language reference

Present perfect and past simple

We use the present perfect for situations when the time period is not finished.

- I've had this computer for five years. (I've got the same computer now.)

We use the past simple for completed actions in the past, when the time period is finished.

- I had this computer for five years. (I haven't got the same computer now.)

Quantity

Countable nouns can be 'counted'. They have a singular and plural form (eg an egg, two eggs, three eggs ...).

Uncountable nouns cannot be counted. They are not separate objects (eg work, information, coffee). You cannot make them into plurals by adding -s, because they only have a singular form.

We use some, any, much, many and a lot of to talk about quantity of things.

We use some with uncountable nouns and plural countable nouns in affirmative sentences.

We use any with uncountable nouns and with plural countable nouns in negative sentences and questions.

We use much, many and a lot of to talk about big quantities. We often use much with uncountable nouns in negative sentences and questions.

We often use many in negative sentences with plural countable nouns.

We use a lot of in affirmative and negative sentences and in questions, with countable and uncountable nouns.

A lot of is the same as lots of. We use of after a lot when a lot comes before a noun. When there is no noun after a lot we do not use of.

- Have you got any water? Yes, I've got a lot.

We use too much or too many to say that something is more than sufficient.

We use a little and a few to talk about small quantities. We use a little with uncountable nouns and a few with plural countable nouns.

- A little sugar is good for you.
- There are only a few tigers in the world.

Remember!

When you expect the answer to be 'Yes' to an offer, ask a question using some. If the reply is affirmative, we can use some; if it is negative, we can use any.

- Would you like some coffee?
Yes, please. (I'd like some.) /
No, thanks. (I don't want any.)
